Jerry Shoemaker Hall of Fame president

Builder inductee, 2009

It is my pleasure to bring you greetings from our board of directors of the Saskatoon Sports Hall of Fame. Our 2013 induction dinner was a resounding success. The dinner was held Nov. 2 with close to 500 people in attendance. Thanks to all of you who came out to celebrate with the inductees.

One of our goals for 2013 was to increase the number of nominations to our Hall. We created a committee that worked hard and were very successful. However, we must continue to make sure that we continue to recognize the many athlete and builders that deserve to be in our Hall. I encourage all of you to consider making a nomination.

We are very fortunate to have great volunteers step forward to serve on our board. We are also very fortunate all of our board will return for another year.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank our board for the great job that they do. They are Allan Few, Ed Bryant, Don Cousins, Mary Green, Ken Gunn, Keith McLean, Ian Mirtle, Noreen Murphy, John Neufeld, Bob Reindl, Ron Walsh and Ron Woodley.

Plans are now underway for our 29th induction ceremonies and dinner set for Saturday, Nov. 1 at TCU Place.

Once again, we are accepting nominations for team, builder and athlete categories. Submission deadline is April 1.

Nomination forms are available at the Saskatoon Sports Hall of Fame office at the Field House or on our website

Saskatoon has a big connection to hockey at the Winter Olympics. Coaching Jack McLeod was the head coach of Canada's team that won a bronze medal at the 1968 Olympics in Grenoble, France.

Dave King was head coach for three Olympics. Canada finished fourth in both the 1984 Olympics in Sarajevo, Yugoslavia and 1988 Olympics in Calgary. Canada was a silver medallist in the 1992 Olympics in Albertville, France.

Mike Babcock was head coach as Canada won hockey gold in the 2010 Olympics in Vancouver and this year in the Olympics in Sochi, Russia.

McLeod is enshrined in the Saskatoon Sports Hall of Fame as a builder. King is in the Hall as coach of the 1982-83 University of Saskatchewan Huskies hockey team.

McLeod and King are in the International Ice Hockey Federation Hall of Fame.

Harry Bailey and Roy Ellis start the Water Babies Swim Club at the YMCA in Saskatoon in 1946.

"That pool was 45 feet long and 18 feet wide, no bigger than normal pools in a hotel," Bailey said years later. "Yet out of that came really class swimmers."

Among the swimmers Bailey coached are Martha (Nelson) Grant, who competed in the 1972 Munich Olympics, Barb Shockey, a bronze medallist in the 1979 Pan-American Games in Puerto Rico and a finalist in two races in the 1978 Commonwealth Games in Edmonton, and Ken Olson, who later coached the Goldfins.

Bailey, Grant and Shockey are all in the Saskatoon Sports Hall of Fame.

DESIGNING SASKATOON'S FINEST ATHLETE

Inductees into the Saskatoon Sports Hall of Fame pick a quality they want an athlete to have

Sanderson

"Lyle Sanderson.
"Lyle has an uncanny ability to see the hidden, untapped talent and potential in athletes; by allowing athletes to recognize their opportunity for greatness he fostered self-belief, pride, and the drive to actualize. His approach to train and compete served to unite athletes with varied personalities and preferences towards a common positive and productive goal. As a result, countless athletes would become key team contributors, champions, or leaders; and all were needed for success. As he would often state, 'Paper teams don't win championships.'

"Despite formerly stepping down from full-time coaching ranks in 2004, Lyle continues to support and inspire athletes who cross his path. To date seven of his CIS track and field championship teams are inducted into the Hall."

Garvie

"Mental toughness of Gord Garvie.
"There was no quitting or giving in with coach Garvie. Being mentally tough and mentally ready for both practice and competition was something he tried to instill in all of his athletes."

— Bruce Waldner
athlete inductee, Saskatoon Sports Hall

Yausie

"A national championship game in Montreal in 2002; we were playing a very good team, St.-Leonard Cougars.
"At the end of the game Matt Yausie comes to me on the sideline telling me he needed to go to the hospital. He'd broken his arm in the first quarter of the game.

"He never told anyone during the entire game his injury. He was a captain and just received All-Canadian.

"A truly selfless act of a true leader."

"Karen Clarke Dumas, 1986 athlete inductee.
"Strong-minded, dedicated, very high personal standards, and a pleasure to coach!
"I was Karen Clarke Dumas's synchro coach when she was a student at Aden Bowman Collegiate in the mid-1960s."

builder inductee

Dumas

"What makes the elite athlete is god given talent. You are born with it or not.

"A great example is Rueben Mayes. He would have been great at whatever sport he put his mind to."

— Doug Archibald
team inductee
Saskatoon Sports Hall
as player on U of S Huskies hockey team

Mayes

"Jean Healy's enthusiasm.

"Having underwent severe and lengthy chemo sessions for breast cancer starting in 2006, she worked her way up and brought a legion of other women, all breast cancer survivors, along with her through many fitness-related activities:

"She leads the biggest fundraising team for the MS Bike tour up north, also practises, then rides the 60k race on a tandem bike with a blind lady.

"She started a dragonboat racing team called Busting With Energy, all breast cancer survivors.

"She runs at the track and does throws. She runs road races up to half marathon.

"The most important quality for an athlete is enthusiasm. This applies to all levels of competition. No matter how hard an athlete works or how fine the coach, how great the training facilities, how much money is at stake, if enthusiasm is lost, performance suffers.

"She is my hero and champion."

— Judy Warick
builder inductee
Saskatoon Sports Hall

"Jake Wetzel.

"In attaining Olympic gold in rowing, he wanted it so bad he made it happen.

"There are many hurdles and needs along the way. He in some form found a means to achieve and overcome."
